Ananda Marga: a deadly mix of yoga, violence?

A cult active on the Peninsula says its goals are humanitarian. But others link it to killings around the world.

By Bernard Bauer
Staff Writer

A worldwide sect that runs yoga and meditation classes at a secluded Los Altos Hills house is under investigation by the FBI because it is suspected of engaging in terrorist activities.

Publicly, the sect, the Ananda Marga Yoga Society, blends Eastern spirituality with a wide array of social programs. It operates medical clinics, nursery schools and food programs for the poor in more than 130 countries, including two sites in Santa Clara County.

But there is a darker side to Ananda Marga. Throughout the world, the cult has been connected to violence and bloodshed.

The sect's guru, Prabhakar Ranjan Sarkar, spent seven years in an Indian jail on charges of murdering his defectors. The conviction was reversed on appeal in 1978.

In the interim, seven followers burned themselves to death to protest the guru's prison sentence. Other cult-ists went on a spree of terrorism aimed at freeing their leader, according to CIA and FBI documents.

Among the attacks:
✓ An Indian embassy attaché was stabbed in Washington, D.C.
✓ An Air India employee was assaulted with a knife in Los Angeles.

✓ A police officer and two garbage collectors were killed when the Hilton Hotel in Bombay, Australia, was bombed during a meeting of 12 Commonwealth ministers.

✓ Two cultists each were sentenced to 16 years in prison for conspiring to murder Australian right-wing politician Robert Cameron.

✓ Two American cultists were convicted of the attempted murder of an Iranian diplomat in the Philippines. One, who co-founded the Los Altos Hills center, recently won an acquittal on appeal.

✓ A policeman was seriously injured when a bomb exploded in the Air India office in Kuala Lumpur, Malaysia.

✓ The Indian High Commission office in Canberra, Australia, suffered more than $250,000 in damage from an arson fire.

✓ Diplomats and Air India employees in Australia and England were stabbed.

Espect in slaying

In an unrelated 1981 incident, police in Europe are seeking a veteran cult member who allegedly lured a former Ananda Marga monk to Sweden and killed him. Dadaji Dadasananda, a spokesman for the group's national headquarters in Denver, acknowledged that some terrorist acts whose membership in the United States has been estimated at 5,000 to 20,000, runs terrorist training camps in California and New York. The State Department has identified similar operations in India.

A sect spokesman said the reports are "totally bogus."

Yet the FBI considers Ananda Marga to have a high potential for violence.

Like other sects, it is based on a strict dogma. Its particular dogma advocates a "new-world government" headed by the cult's leaders. The guru, known to his followers as "Baba" or "Father," predicts that this plan will succeed and that the cult will rule the world by the year 2005.

"They foresee the bringing in of (that) age ... through violence," said David Fetcho, an ex-cultist. "It's kind of taken for granted that that will happen."

As a preventive measure, the State Department has banned Stryer, the guru, from entering this country.

Fear of violence

"Our concern is that his presence here might lead to acts of violence," said an Indian-affairs analyst in the department who requested anonymity.

No acts of terrorism have been linked to the tax-exempt Los Altos Hills center, where about 800 disciples have been trained in the group's political and religious beliefs.

In fact, Ananda Marga denies any role in the violence attributed to the organization. Rather, spokesmen stress its social-welfare programs and the letters of commendation the organization has earned around the world.

"I know several Margas and they are fine, committed people," the State Department official said.

Sect spokesmen blame communists for spreading "inaccurate and purposefully misleading statements" about the organization. The two groups have a history of antagonism in India.

Ananda Marga also blames communists for the April 30 daylight massacre of 17 of its nuns and monks in downtown Calcutta. The victims were stoned and stabbed to death and then piled in a heap and burned.

Disagreement with communists

Indian police say the massacre was caused by rumors that Ananda Marga was stealing children. The sect claims that it was an organized attack by the Communist Party.

Whether to protect itself or — as its critics claim — to foster its own violence, the cult maintains a security branch, known as VSS.

The VSS is the main "violence-prone wing of Ananda Marga" and is responsible for a series of terrorist acts around the world in 1977 and 1978, according to declassified CIA documents.

trained in the use of martial weapons, including knives and machetes (martial-arts weapons), the U.S. State Department said.

There are unconfirmed reports of VSS camps in California and New York, a department official said, "but I haven't seen any hard evidence of that."

Jim Venezia, treasurer-secretary of the VSS national office in Los Angeles, said all charges of terrorism are "totally bogus."

Venezia said the 70 VSS members in the United States act as "a security force ... to keep order" during political demonstrations by Ananda Marga members.

Self-defense encouraged

"We don't carry arms," he said. "We

attributed to the cult "may have been committed by misguided youth who have no faith in Ananda Marga ideology. But Ananda Marga is an organization directed to service to humanity and raising the spiritual consciousness of everyone."

The current FBI investigation is based in part on reports that Ananda Marga is planning more terrorist activities, according to an agency source who requested anonymity.

"We have investigated them in the past for isolated incidents," the FBI source said. "We did not investigate them as an organization until recently."

Last October, Indian intelligence agencies notified the FBI that Ananda Marga members were planning to cross the California-Mexico border and assassinate Prime Minister Indira Gandhi during the Cancun Summit.

Tightened security

And during Pope John Paul II's visit to the Philippines last year, police instituted extreme security measures after Ananda Marga reportedly threatened the pope's life.

The U.S. government also has received

don't train people in any organized way. But we encourage that people should be prepared to defend themselves."

Like their counterparts overseas, VSS members in the United States wear uniforms of gray shirts with epaulettes, khaki pants and Australian bush hats, Venezia said.

Many U.S. followers seem to be unaware of the charges of evil that critics say permeates the inner sanctum of the cult.

"It's kind of a schizophrenic group," said Josh Baran, who runs "Sorting It Out," a counseling service in Berkeley for drop-outs from cults. "There are people that have been involved for years who don't know about that side of things at all."

A former U.S. government official whose son belongs to the sect, said that it good deeds are merely a cover for its noble purposes.

"Despite its idealistic face in the United States, it's basically an organization dedicated to the overthrow of the basic institutions of the United States and the free world," he said.

Cult's guru inspires devotion and 7 supreme sacrifices

By Bernard Bauer
Staff Writer

To his devout followers, Prabhat Ranjan Sarkar is a god.

"I was searching for my guru for years. In Ananda Marga, I do not have to search anymore," said a 28-year-old Trinidad man who trained recently at the Los Altos Hills center. "It is a miracle."

To others, the guru of Ananda Marga is Satan.

Nawal Kishore, a former high-ranking snook, wrote in 1975 that Sarkar is "a perverted megalomaniac" whose "murder squads" tied disloyal members to trees and stabbed them to death.

"It is a fact that, under the guise of spiritual practices, Sarkar and his associates have been indulging in quite heinous crimes," says a declassified but heavily censored 1980 CIA document.

Cult critics say that Sarkar runs his organization as a merciless autocracy and inspires unthinking loyalty in his followers. He was arrested in 1971 after Indian law-enforcement agencies uncovered an alleged plot to murder 18 defectors.

Sarkar and several followers were charged with six murders, as well as kidnapping and weapons possession.

From the outset, his followers mounted a long campaign aimed at winning the guru's release.

Seven disciples eventually burned themselves to death in protest.

One self-immolation occurred in the United States, with others in Europe, India and the Philippines, according to a sect manifesto.

"It was seen as a great sacrifice," said ex-member Rabbi Yehudah Fine of New York City. "These people were doing the ultimate sacrifice. That's what you were told."

Bauer claims about the sect perished through the 1970s. "It became a frequent practice for the Anandamurti (Sarkar), sitting on a chair with a rod in his hand, to chastise errant (monks), all of them stripped naked," ex-member Kishore wrote. "He used to cane them one by one mercilessly...."

The Margis were dismayed to find that while some of them got punishments, others were continued to enjoy his confidence, particularly those who brought young boys for the perverted satisfaction of Anandamurti.

A spokesman for Ananda Marga's national office in Denver called the allegations about Sarkar's behavior "a complete sham. I doubt you would find 1 percent of truth in them."

In 1976, Sarkar and four co-defendants were found guilty of murder and conspiracy to murder and sentenced to life in prison. The conviction was overturned on appeal two years later when a higher court ruled that the testimony of the prosecution's main witness had not been sufficiently corroborated.

Still, parents of current members say they are terrified by what seems to be a blind allegiance to the guru.

"I don't think anyone would have the drive on their own to go out and burn themselves," one father said. "There's some kind of mind control that makes them act as automatons."

Ex-devotee's lecture tour in Europe proved fatal

By Bernard Besser
Staff Writer

For eight years, life in Colorado was one-biter for one high-level devotee from Ananda Marga. Bismuth Singh had moved to Boulder after a 10th forker, he gave. There, Singh set up meditation group, the Bhakta Peninsula, over the years, built a significant follow-

Then, inexplicably, Singh disappeared during a trip to Europe last year.

Two-and-a-half months later, his body lay on a mountain trail, stuffed inside a plastic bag, found in the surface of a lake near Bismuth.

The prime suspect, Bismuth Singh of Sweden, still is at large, according to police in his native country. Bismuth Singh is a member of Ananda Marga and was arrested in the Denver branch of the first police stop.

Arrest in killing

Two months ago, an alleged assassination in the killing, Franz Wernke, was arrested on his arrival in West Germany from Israel. Swedish and West German police say they believe Wernke, 44, belongs to Ananda Marga.

Singh reportedly had been seemed to command to Boulder when he left India and Ananda Marga in 1975. In Sweden, his popularity grew quickly, and, "by its followers, extremely to Ananda Marga, even joining of his power."

By 1978, Singh was traveling around the world, lecturing on his religion. Then, in February 1980, Bismuth Singh, the suspect in the killing, rented an apartment near the guru's residence and became an apparently devoted disciple.

Organized tour

Four people realized that Bismuth Singh, then 34, had been an Ananda Marga member for seven years and was a trainer who traveled around the United States lecturing on his religion.

Bismuth Singh eventually converted Singh to Buddhism on a European lecture tour, which he volunteered to arrange. The suspect then left for Sweden.

Singh disappeared on April 30, the day he arrived in Sweden. His decomposed body was found July 18 inside a plastic bag weighed with rocks.

Peninsula center trains disciples

At a large wood-and-glass home in the foothills above Los Angeles, Ananda Marga recruits from North and Central America and the Caribbean are indoctrinated in the group's political and religious programs.

About 600 people have been trained at the last-mentioned center since it opened in 1977.

The disciples, led by an Indian monk, live full time in the house, located at 37155 Monty Road on unincorporated Santa Clara County land bordering the town of Los Angeles Hills. Trainers pass through the center in small groups by short-term training sessions that end June.

Four nearby guide

It is a spacious clubhouse, Followers, called Marga, along on the floor and have low pronunciation.

Each Sunday at noon, the disciples provide food for breakfast in downtown San Jose. On Sunday nights, about 10 people gather at the house for chanting and meditation.

The training session follows a schedule that includes five hours a day of meditation and indoctrination. All members are vegetarians and eat breakfast and dinner together.

"Many Marga feel a sense of solidarity," said Bob Larson, 34, of ALABAMA, who was recently trained at the center. "Ananda Marga is a solidarity movement. It's similar to the Peace solidarity movement. We're comrades."

The sect also runs the Ananda Marga School for practitioners near Los Angeles Hills. Teachers meditate among the children to calm them, and parents whose children refuse the school return to the school. The sect's philosophy is not part of the curriculum, according to long teachers and students.

Assignment overseas

Former members of Ananda Marga say the Los Angeles Hills training center was co-founded by a Marga devotee named Victoria Sheppard, who apparently was the first devotee in the United States.

Sheppard, 34, who occupied the housing space "Madhouse," "House Full of Divine Devotion" — later was sent overseas as a missionary. She ended up in the Philippines, where, police said, she attempted to murder a local diplomat.

Sheppard was convicted of the crime, but her conviction was reversed last year by an appeals court in Manila. Her co-defendant, Thomas Dwyer, 34, had his appeal rejected. He had been sent with the Philippine Court of the Philippines. Neither Dwyer nor Sheppard could be reached for comment.

"We have full well that my son isn't capable of this," said Dwyer's father, William, who lives in Wichita, Kan. "He's some part of the Ananda Marga hierarchy in Manila. These major things in life to help people. They're just working their heads off to try and help the poor people."

who has studied Ananda Marga for years, declared to be identical because he feared retaliation.

Seeking global change

"They want to bring about... a worldwide transformation of society based on Ananda Marga principles," said Rabbi Yehoshua Pines of New York City's Chabad synagogue. "They have the money."

"They are creating a another form of terrorism. They still do anything... supernatural. They will kill, and kill."

The center of the movement... a cult that exists around Ananda Marga. A cult... 30-year-old guru, a former railway clerk whose San Francisco, Calif., name is "Anandacharya," means "servant of the gods."

Barbar's most recent of his early meetings living with Indian Chandra Shekhar, a radical Indian nationalist who recruited 80,000 soldiers to fight with Hitler and the Japanese against the Allies.

In 1960, Barbar founded his cult, blending yoga, meditation and political dogma. The cult was exported to the United States in 1968, to an area where Indian guru and religious were finding fertile ground among young people in search of alternative lifestyles. Today, there are branches in 35 states.

Present membership figures are difficult to obtain. Ananda Marga claims 1 million members worldwide, with 50,000 in the United States. The State Department estimates there are only 200,000 members worldwide, with 4,000 in the United States.

Recruit

...tended to be hippies who were using drugs and going into meditation, said former member Karen Wengler, a computer programmer at the University of California at Berkeley who was the first devotee in this country. "We had a mantra we were supposed to say every morning in the light bulb in the bedroom. During the early 1970s, Ananda Marga spoke up (members of the cult) in the United States. In India, however, critics struck the organization."

Removals were claiming that Barbar was entering the circulation of delayed prison. Barbar's wife, Una, left her husband in October 1973, saying it was "impossible for me to be a silent spectator of inhuman, brutal and sometimes heinous acts."

Two innocent lives: Barbar was arrested and charged with murder.

"I landed in India the day he was arrested," recalled a former member who was sent to the institution to study with Barbar. "A friend of mine was sent to the same place and was sent to the same place."

group of ex-teachers had gathered.

"The guy said that he personally trained people to kill," the ex-member said. "He said there was a murder conviction. I left the cult and never looked back."

Principles of killing

Barbar's followers said that the murder charges were trumped up and that the guru was a victim of political persecution. They staged rallies in the United States and overseas and brought thousands of devotees protesting Barbar's innocence.

After his arrest in 1975, Barbar embarked on a world tour of Ananda Marga centers. In 1978, defying the State Department ban, he tried to visit the Los Alamos Hills center. He was detained at San Francisco International Airport and most angry, having beaten hundreds of angry disciples who charged that their leaders of religion had been violent.

Barbar teaches his followers that the world is in a state of moral and political decay. Both capitalists and communists have failed miserably to meet the material and spiritual needs of mankind, he says. "The only way to achieve 'intellectual revolution' and by Ananda Marga. If that fails, however, a 'physical revolution' is inevitable."

"No problem of this world can be solved by means of (the) principle of non-violence," Barbar has written.

One of the texts sold at the Los Alamos Hills center stresses that pain.

"Any act of violence against anyone, against tyranny and oppression is justified," one book says.

Emphasis on charity

Nityanandacharya Advaita, the self-proclaimed Indian messiah who runs the Los Alamos Hills center, says that violence is the destruction of the state-mandated system. He stresses the humanitarian side of the for Indians in San Jose and the Ananda Marga school for practitioners, attended near the center.

The room says that the guru's teachings have been misinterpreted.

"We don't support violence," he said. "But when the capitalists exploit... naturally the patience of the people is gone... When the communists become more and more, a chaotic situation comes, and that brings violence."

As in other cults, life in Ananda Marga is highly regimented. Hours are spent each day in intense meditation. Followers consider the life ennobling. Critics call it brainwashing.

"At its most intense levels, you become just biologically lost, washed over with a very physically pleasant feeling," ex-disciple Patsy said.

Mind-control charged

Rabbi Pines agrees. "There is no doubt that I was in an altered, hypnotized state," he said. "The techniques they teach are mind-control and mind-control."

Pines says he is now more or less brainwashed. Charveta, he said, he could not have brought to a cult whose symbol includes a crucifix, which spokesman says stands for victory.

"Even though that has nothing to do with Hitler, the fact that I could sit down, get my hands on that crucifix, and... I was in a cult... Pines said. He called Ananda Marga "a mass movement that included one extra item, a hypnotic, spiritual philosophy on top of it all. It scared me, as a Jew, when I thought of Nazi Germany."

Some ex-members are perplexed at the hostility of former disciples.

"My view of Ananda Marga is that it teaches yoga, it teaches spiritual purification, and that's the core of it," said a former devotee who identified himself only as Bob. "There are no brainwashing techniques. They don't pack people off to a farm. I was never out of communication with my parents."

"It's not a rip-off. I never felt I was deceived and so on."

Tough on parents

The increasing contributions are signaling to many parents of cult members.

"The parents are very, very afraid," said Betty McOmally of the Citizens Freedom Foundation, a national anti-cult organization based in Springfield, Va. "They're afraid harm will come to their children. They're afraid of physical restrictions."

Some parents try to keep in touch with their children, but the conversations can be breaking.

"I told my son that he was being deceived, that the sect had a golden shell around a dark core," one father said. "He laughed and said he was planning to go to India to be with Bob."

That decision horrified the father, but he struggled to remain calm. "I told him I loved him," the man said. "I told him we would always be here for him."

"And I told him I hoped he wasn't lead-

Ananda Marga: a deadly mix of yoga, violence?

A cult active on the Peninsula says its goals are humanitarian. But others link it to killings around the world.

By Bernard Shoner
Staff Writer

A worldwide sect that runs yoga and meditation classes at a secluded Los Altos Hills house is under investigation by the FBI because it is suspected of engaging in terrorist activities.

Publicly, the sect, the Ananda Marga Yoga Society, blends Eastern spiritualism with a wide array of social programs. It operates medical clinics, sensory schools and food programs for the poor in more than 130 countries, including two sites in Santa Clara County.

But there is a darker side to Ananda Marga. Throughout the world, the cult has been connected to violence and bloodshed.

The sect's guru, Pradhari Ranjeev Sarabhai, spent seven years in an Indian jail on charges of murdering six devotees. The conviction was reversed on appeal in 1979.

In the interim, seven followers burned themselves to death to protest the guru's prison sentence. Other cult-ists took to a spree of terrorism aimed at freeing their leader, according to CIA and FBI documents.

Among the attacks:

- ✓ An Indian embassy attack was staged in Washington, D.C.
- ✓ An Air India airplane was attacked with a bomb in Los Angeles.
- ✓ A bomb and a few hours later blown through the window of the Air India office in New York City.
- ✓ A police officer and two garbage collectors were killed when the Hilton Hotel in Sidney, Australia, was bombed.

During a meeting of 11 Commonwealth nations.

- ✓ Two militants each were sentenced to 10 years in prison for conspiring to murder Australian right-wing extremist Robert Cameron.
- ✓ Two American militants were convicted of the attempted murder of an Indian diplomat in the Philippines. One, who founded the Los Altos Hills center, actually was an espionage agent.

Ananda Marga followers:

✓ A policeman was seriously injured when a bomb exploded in the Air India office in Kuala Lumpur, Malaysia.

✓ The Indian High Commission office in Canberra, Australia, suffered more than $250,000 in damage from an arson fire.

✓ Diplomats and Air India employees in Australia and England were stalked.

Suspect in slaying

In an unrelated 1981 incident, police in Europe are seeking a veteran cult member who allegedly lured a former Ananda Marga monk to Sweden and killed him.

Dedaj, Danceshanda, a spokesman for the group's national headquarters in Denver, acknowledged that some terrorist acts whose membership in the United States has been estimated at 1,000 to 20,000, runs terrorist training camps in California and New York. "The State Department has identified similar operations in India."

A sect spokesman said the reports are "totally bogus."

Yet the FBI considers Ananda Marga to have a high potential for violence.

Like other sects, it is based on a strict dogma. Its particular dogma advocates a "new-world government" headed by the cult's leaders. The guru, known to his followers as "Baba" or "Father," predicts that this plan will succeed and that the cult will rule the world by the year 2005.

"They foresee the bringing in of (that) age . . . through violence," said David Frischo, an ex-cultist. "It's kind of taken for granted that that will happen."

As a preventive measure, the State Department has banned barriers, the guru, from entering this country.

Fear of violence

"Our concern is that his presence here might lead to acts of violence," said an Indian-affairs analyst in the department who requested anonymity.

His acts of terrorism have been linked to the Lasarempo Los Altos Hills center, where about 900 disciples have been trained in the group's political and religious beliefs.

In fact, Ananda Marga denies any role in the violence attributed to the organization. Further, spokesmen stress its social-welfare programs and the letters of commendation the organization has earned around the world.

"I know several Marga and they are fine, committed people," the State Department official said.

Sect spokesmen blame communists for spreading "inaccurate and purposefully misleading statements" about the organization. The two groups have a history of antagonism in India.

Ananda Marga also blames communists for the April 30 daylight massacre of 17 of its monks and monks in downtown Calcutta. The victims were stoned and stabbed to death and then piled in a heap and burned.

Disagreement with communists

Indian police say the massacre was caused by rumors that Ananda Marga was stealing children. The sect claims that it was an organized attack by the Communist Party.

Whether to protect itself or — as its critics claim — to foster its own violence, the cult maintains a security branch, known as VSS.

The VSS is the inside "violence-prone wing of Ananda Marga" and is responsible for a series of terrorist acts around the world in 1977 and 1978, according to declassified CIA documents.

trained in the use of martial weapons, including knives and nunchukas (martial-arts weapons), the U.S. State Department said.

There are unconfirmed reports of VSS camps in California and New York, a department official said, "but I haven't seen any hard evidence of that."

John Venezia, treasurer-secretary of the VSS national office in Los Angeles, said all charges of terrorism are "totally bogus."

Venezia said the 70 VSS members in the United States act as "a security force . . . to keep order" during political demonstrations by Ananda Marga members.

Self-defense encouraged

"We don't carry arms," he said. "We

My view of Ananda Marga is that it teaches yoga, it teaches spiritual practices, and that's the core of it.

attributed to the cult "may have been committed by misguided youth who have no faith in Ananda Marga ideology. But Ananda Marga is an organization directed to service to humanity and raising the spiritual consciousness of everyone."

The current FBI investigation is based in part on reports that Ananda Marga is planning more terrorist activities, according to an agency source who requested anonymity.

"We have investigated them in the past for isolated incidents," the FBI source said. "We did not investigate them as an organization until recently."

Last October, Indian intelligence agencies notified the FBI that Ananda Marga members were planning to cross the California-Mexico border and assassinate Prime Minister Indira Gandhi during the Cancun Summit.

Tightened security

And during Pope John Paul II's visit to the Philippines last year, police instituted extreme security measures after Ananda Marga reportedly threatened the pope's life.

The U.S. government also has received

don't train people in any organized way. But we encourage that people should be prepared to defend themselves."

Like their counterparts overseas, VSS members in the United States wear uniforms of gray shirts with epaulettes, khaki pants and Australian bush hats, Venezia said.

Many U.S. followers seem to be unaware of the charges of evil that critics say permeates the inner sanctum of the cult.

"It's kind of a schizophrenic group," said Josh Baran, who runs "Sorting It Out," a counseling service in Berkeley for drop-outs from cults. "There are people that have been involved for years who don't know about that side of things at all."

A former U.S. government official whose son belongs to the sect, said that its good deeds are merely a cover for its noble purposes.

"Despite its idealistic face in the United States, it's basically an organization dedicated to the overthrow of the basic institutions of the United States and the free world," he said.

Cult's guru inspires devotion and 7 supreme sacrifices

By Bernard Bauer

To his devout followers, Prabbat Ranjan Sarkar is a god.

"I was searching for my guru for years. In Ananda Marga, I do not have to search anymore," said a 28-year-old Trinidad man who trained recently at the Los Altos Hills center. "It is a miracle."

To others, the guru of Ananda Marga is Satan.

Nawal Kishore, a former high-ranking monk, wrote in 1975 that Sarkar is "a perverted megalomaniac" whose "murder squads" shed disloyal members to trees and stabbed them to death.

"It is a fact that, under the guise of spiritual practices, Sarkar and his associates have been indulging in quite heinous crimes," says a declassified but heavily censored 1980 CIA document.

Cult critics say that Sarkar runs his organization as a merciless autocracy and inspires unthinking loyalty in his followers. He was arrested in 1971 after Indian law enforcement agencies uncovered an alleged plot to murder 18 defectors.

Sarkar and several followers were charged with six murders, as well as kidnapping and weapons possession.

From the outset, his followers mounted a long campaign aimed at winning the guru's release.

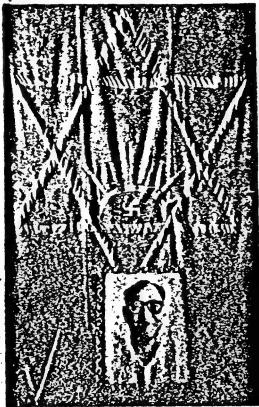

Seven disciples eventually burned themselves to death in protest.

One self-immolation occurred in the United States, with others in Europe, India and the Philippines, according to a sect manifesto.

"It was seen as a great sacrifice," said ex-member Rabbi Yehudah Pine of New York. "Those people were doing the ultimate sacrifice. That's what you were told."

Bizarre claims about the sect persisted through the 1970s. "It became a frequent practice for the Anandamurti (Sarkar), sitting on a chair with a red in his hand, to chastise errant (monks), all of them stripped naked," ex-member Kishore wrote. "He used to cane them one by one mercilessly...."

"The Margis were dismayed to find that while some of them got punishments, others are continued to enjoy his confidence, particularly those who brought young boys for the perverted satisfaction of Anandamurti."

A spokesman for Ananda Marga's national office in Denver called the allegations about Sarkar's behavior "a complete sham. I doubt you would find 1 percent of truth in them."

In 1976, Sarkar and four co-defendants were found guilty of murder and conspiracy to murder and sentenced to life in prison. The conviction was overturned on appeal two years later when a higher court ruled that the testimony of the prosecution's main witness had not been sufficiently corroborated.

Still, parents of current members say they are terrified by what seems to be a blind allegiance to the guru.

"I don't think anyone would have the drive on their own to go out and burn themselves," one father said. "There's some kind of mind control that makes them act as automatons."

Ex-devotee's lecture tour in Europe proved fatal

By Bernard Shaw

For eight years, life in Colorado was unexciting for one high-level devotee from Annate Marga.

Reinhardt Singh had moved to Boulder after a year with Fort, his guru. There, Singh set up his meditation group, the Mahaka Foundation, and, over the years, built a significant following. Then, inexplicably, Singh disappeared during a trip to Europe last year.

Twenty-four months later, his body (naked and decomposed) lay, stuffed inside a plastic bag, found in the vicinity of a lake near Stockholm.

The grave suspect, Ben Reinhardt of London, told it all in large, according to police in his native country Reinhardt is a member of Annate Marga and was arrested in the British branch of the law, police say.

Arrested in London

Two months after an alleged accusation in the United States, Reinhardt was arrested as he arrived in West Germany from Nepal. Swedish and West German police say they believe Reinhardt, an ex-devotee, is capable Marga.

Singh reportedly had been married-innocent—his father went to left India and Annate Marga to 3. In Boulder, his popularity grew quickly, and, according to followers, extremists to Annate Marga began joining of his guru.

By 1980, Singh was traveling around the world, lecturing on his religion. Then, in February 1981, Reinhardt, the suspect in the killing, moved an apartment near the guru's residence and became an apparently devoted disciple.

Organized tour

Few people realized that Reinhardt, then 34, had been an Annate Marga member for seven years and was a trainer who traveled around the United States instructing new members.

Reinhardt eventually convinced Singh to embark on a European lecture tour, which he volunteered to arrange. The suspect then left for Sweden.

Singh disappeared on April 30, the day he arrived in Sweden. His decomposed body was found July 18 inside a plastic bag weighted with rocks.

Peninsula center trains disciples

At a large wood-and-glass home in the foothills above Los Altos, Annate Marga recruits from North and Central America and the Caribbean and instructs them in the guru's spiritual and religious precepts.

About 500 people have been trained at the approximately center since it opened in 1977.

As devotees, led by an Indian guru, live full time in the house located at 17440 Montezuma Road, near the Santa Clara County line bordering the town of Los Altos Hills. Trainees pass through the center in small groups for six-week training sessions that cost $100.

Four security guards

It is a spiritual retreat. Followers, called Mahe, sleep on the floor and have few possessions.

Each Sunday at noon, the disciples provide food for hundreds in downtown San Jose. On Sunday nights, about 40 people gather at the house for chanting and meditation.

The training session follows a schedule that includes five hours a day of meditation and instruction. All members are vegetarians and are instructed and discipline.

"Many Mahe had a basic sense of spirituality," said Ben Lamm, 34, of Atlanta, who was recently trained at the center. "Annate Marga is a religious movement. It's closer to the Hindu religious movement—Buddhism."

The center also runs the Annate Marga School for practitioners near Los Altos Hills. Teachers instruct the disciples in yoga, meditation, and various other disciplines around the school system is highly. The center's philosophy is an part of the curriculum, according to Ben Lamm and others.

Assignment overseas

Former members of Annate Marga say the Los Altos Hills training center was co-founded by a Mahe-led woman named Victoria Singh. She also appears to have been the first devotee in the United States.

Reinhardt, 34, who adopted the Mahe name "Mahe" — "Star Path of Divine Essence" — later was sent overseas as a missionary. She ended up in the Philippines, where, police say, she attempted to murder an Indian diplomat.

Reinhardt was convicted of the crime, but her conviction was reversed last year by an appeals court in Manila. Her co-defendant, Ben Lamm, 34, had his conviction reversed. His wife lives in the Supreme Court of the Philippines. Neither Dwyer nor Reinhardt could be reached for comment.

"We know full well that my son isn't capable of this," said Dwyer's father, William, who lives in Wichita, Kan. "He's more part of the Annate Marga hierarchy in Manila. They major thing in life is to help poor people. They're just working their heads off to try and help the poor people."

— Bernard Shaw
